Van Deusen's Imp oved Wahpene.—Since the further improvements which have been made in this great hair preparation it has become an object of universal attraction. This is not to be wondered at. for it has been found to act in conjunction with nature in converting grey hair to its original color. In such a process the bulbs and germs receive fresh life and energy, producing an entire new growth where partial baldness appeared, and imparting a soft and glossy appearance to the newly-formed hair. It is likewise found to be a safe and agreeable companion for the toilet, eradicating dandruff and all cutaneous cruptions from the heat. P S.—For its entire effects of the changing prey hair to its first color and promoting a new growth, the inventor would respectfully refer to the following, among various other persons in proof of its unquestionable meritaries.
